Drowned from Rowbont.

The bray of a young woman was found this afternoon in the Harlem River at One Hundred and Eighty-fifth street. It is undoubtedly that of Mrs. Kate Duerr, the nincteen-year-old bride who fell from a rowcost in the Harlem River a few days ago and was drowned. She was in the company of a friend of her husband named Hahn, but he has three been absolved from blame.

It is believed that the fugitive is willing to negotiate with either the general agent or some of his subordinates for the surrender of a goodly portion of the worst of it when he managed to pollocate the worst of it when he managed to pull out his gun. He hit one of the sleuths who are in search of the thief. Yesterday two young men who emulate Sherlock Holmes, followed the wrong traffs or made false deductions. Both were arrested and locked up.

A despatch received from Wheeling, W. Va., to-day, reports that an Ohio River Railroad conductor is very confident Cunliffe rode south on his train last Monday night. The clue would indicate that Cunliffe went to Cincinnati while heading for Mexico.
